REUNION POEM (1926)

The years have passed swiftly, so swiftly,
Many friends of the past are now gone;
Younger kinsfolk are filling their places
As the years move on—and still on.

We linger to-day and we listen
For the sound of voices now still;
We would clasp again the vanished hand,
As we try their places to fill.

Speed onward, O years! Speed onward!
And when all life's victories are won,
May we meet in that final reunion
In the Land of the Unsetting Sun.
